RSRV — Brand Brief

PACKAGE RSRV_TELELAUNCH_BRIEF_V2 · PREPARED 2026-07-11 · FOR TELELAUNCH (PLATFORM + STOREFRONT BUILD)

Everything needed to build the consumer surface on-brand: the marks, the position, the voice, the palette, the type, the imagery rules. It is deliberately short. Use the files in this package as shipped; where something visual is not covered here, ask rather than improvise.

1. The marks

- RSRV is the consumer mark. It is pronounced "reserve" and is never spelled out letter by letter. Never set the mark adjacent to invitation or RSVP-context copy — it misreads at a glance.
- The endorsement line BY RESERVE MOLECULAR sets in Archivo Regular, letterspaced caps, +10% tracking, in platinum.
- The primary lockup (RSRV over the endorsement line) holds at roughly 96px height and above. Below that, use standalone RSRV. The RM monogram is micro-use only — favicon and seal at 16px and under, never the lead mark.
- Clear space: the height of the R on all sides.
- Never outline the marks, never apply gradients, never place them over photography without an obsidian scrim.
- Descriptor and endorsement devices set in plain text — an em dash or a line break (`RESERVE MOLECULAR — CLINICIAN-DIRECTED`). The double-slash (`//`) device never appears on a customer-facing surface.
- The logo family in `logos/` (SVG masters + PNG exports, dark and light, favicons) is final and frozen. Use the files; do not redraw, re-space, or restyle them.

2. The position

RSRV is a premium, clinician-guided optimization brand for high-performing professionals — people who already hold a standard everywhere else in their lives and expect the same for their body and mind. The differentiator is real, not rhetorical: licensed clinicians direct every protocol, and prescriptions are compounded by licensed US 503A pharmacies, one patient at a time. Verification — testing and documentation — is the quiet proof layer beneath those two facts. In copy and in layout it closes an argument; it never opens one.

The core customer is an established professional or executive, either sex, paying cash. A younger, premium-native customer enters through the non-prescription line and grows into the rest. Build for both without splitting the register.

Women are the whole lineup, not a segment. The category defaults to male-coded copy; RSRV does not. No surface positions the full lineup with male-coded lead copy.

Taglines. Two are sanctioned:

- "The standard, extended." — flagship.
- "Reserve, deepened." — brand-level, for tight surfaces (certificate, etches, small lockups); it also teaches the mark's pronunciation.

These are the only two. Any tagline found in older materials is retired — do not reuse.

3. The voice

The register is the trusted curator with taste — the knowledgeable friend who happens to have access, not a clinic and not a salesman. Quiet authority, understated-confident. Short declaratives. Facts before adjectives; numbers stated plainly. No exclamation points, no hype, no emoji. Luxury is demonstrated, never self-applied: "luxury," "exclusive," "elite," "VIP," and "premium" stay out of customer-facing copy.

Vocabulary that carries the brand: protocol (never "plan," "program," or "subscription box"); your allocation / standing reserve for the replenishment relationship (never "subscription," "auto-ship," "refill plan"); clinician-directed, US-compounded, tested, verified (never "pharma-grade," "research-grade," "purest," "cleanest"); build reserve, restore capacity, for longer (never "anti-aging" or "maximize").

Style rules that shape page copy — apply them as editing checks:

- Vary section length and shape on every page. A page of same-sized blocks with matched endings fails even when each sentence is good.
- At most one three-part parallel construction per page ("X, Y, and Z" with matched grammar). Lists of facts take uneven, concrete form instead.
- Copy never narrates the brand's own restraint or process ("we chose not to…"). Restraint is shown, not described.
- "Ship / ships / shipped": at most once per page, closing position only. Prefer "dispensed," "leaves the pharmacy," "what was dispensed."

4. The palette

TOKEN	HEX	USE
`--rm-obsidian`	#0B0B0D	Dominant field (~70%)
`--rm-charcoal`	#17171A	Elevated surfaces, cards
`--rm-bone`	#F3F1EC	Primary type on dark; light-mode field
`--rm-platinum`	#DCDAD4	Secondary type, dividers
`--rm-espresso`	#3A2E28	Warm accent surfaces
`--rm-champagne`	#C2A15F	Hairlines/seal/deboss ONLY — never fills, never type
`--rm-silver`	#9DA1A6	Data/technical annotation

Ratio discipline: obsidian/charcoal 70 · bone/platinum 20 · espresso 7 · champagne+silver 3. Dark mode is the brand's default state; light mode is the exception (print, clinical documents — this document included).

`tokens.css` in this package is the generated source of these values. Import it and reference the `--rm-*` variables; never hand-edit it or re-derive hex values. If a token must change, it changes upstream and a new file is issued.

5. The typography

- Display / headlines: Newsreader, weight 500 (Medium), variable optical sizing on auto.
- Wordmark / UI / body: Archivo, 400/500.
- Data / annotation: Archivo, all-caps, +8% tracking, set in silver.

Both families are open-source (SIL Open Font License); the variable font files and licenses are in `fonts/`. Self-host them — never load fonts from a third-party CDN on this property.

6. The imagery

Editorial, available-light, subjects in context — a study, a terrace, a car, a court. Product photography is matte black on black with a single champagne hairline of rim light. Never: gym floors, white-coat stock photography, syringes or vials as hero objects, medical crosses, pill-bottle clichés, before/after bodies. Any molecular lattice motif stays abstract and generic — never a recognizable or complete structure. No AI-generated human faces or figures anywhere; human presence is conveyed through implied-presence composition or licensed editorial photography.

7. Compliance

Certain verticals carry marketing restrictions the platform build must respect; TeleLaunch governs compliance implementation on this surface and coordinates the specifics with the owner.

Notes. The primary platform domain is being confirmed — do not hard-code a storefront URL. The marks are pending intent-to-use filings.
